City to give $75,000 to museum

Tino Barren

Ojai City Council voted on Monday to give the non-profit Ojai Museum $75,000 for repairs to the city-owned property and as an operating grant to support the museum’s programs for the next year.

The museum, which is located on the city-owned historic landmark for 34 years, will use the grant to make repairs to a leak in their lease agreement, the museum has paid for all utilities and maintenance of the interior of the building, but the former St. Thomas Aquinas Church was built in 1918 and suffering from termite and stucco damage.

Basically, we believe the city of Ojai does support the $75,000 structural deficit, which means the city of Ojai participates in the predictable ongoing revenues that will sustain this operation. Last year, their total property tax was about $60,000, summarized Ojai City Manager Rob Clark. ‘If we’re unable to discover revenue sources that may have ideas about new structural deficit, we have some potential — but in this case, they have this structural deficit. So I am not sure it’s been funded it.’

The Ojai Valley Museum has been operating under a deficit since 2010.

Mayor Pro Tem Carol Strong said there is no reason to look at the Visitors Center and the Ojai Wilderness Park as being closely integrated, and more funding should be directed towards the museum and the Visitors Center.

Museum Director Michelle Pracy pointed out the museum has paid for all utilities and maintenance of the interior of the building, but the former St. Thomas Aquinas Church was built in 1918 and suffering from termite and stucco damage.

‘I feel that we have a relationship, finally, in recent years, with a city staff to provide us with a budget, and the people who run the museum are working very hard to support the city of Ojai does support the $75,000 structural deficit, which means the city of Ojai participates in the predictable ongoing revenues that will sustain this operation. Northfield High School senior Maddee Whitman is using her last high school assignment as an opportunity to make walking safer for other kids. Her project includes a public education campaign and brochure that encourages property owners to take note of and improve barriers and unfriendly conditions in their front yards. Whitman hopes that every house will have a clear front sidewalk or front walk where pedestrians can safely get off the pavement and away from cars if needed. “As a kid, it was very hard to walk to Topy Town from my house without stepping on overgrown bushes, broken glass, and dogs walking around Ojai can be an obstacle course for pedestrians,” said Whitman.

The brochure includes a lot of dos and don’ts and is illustrated with images of cactus, rose bushes, fences, toys, overgrown trees and bushes, and even cars that might be hazardous or impossible to get off of the curb. “As a kid, it was very hard to walk to Topy Town from my house without stepping on overgrown bushes, broken glass, and dogs walking around Ojai can be an obstacle course for pedestrians,” said Whitman.

T here is no doubt that Matilija is a hot spot for music. It was both the school of choice for several students and their families as well as the neighborhood of choice for many families.

The mayor of Ojai, Tim Filan, attended the Matilija High School graduation ceremony on Thursday, June 13, 2013. In addition to the mayor, other dignitaries in attendance included Assemblyman Tim Donnelly, State Sen. Christine Koster, and Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Michael Tudor.

The Matilija High School Class of 2013 received diplomas in front of the diplomas in front of the school during a ceremony that lasted over two hours. The ceremony included speeches by the principal, the valedictorian, and the salutatorian. The class also sang the school song, "Ojai Valley," and the national anthem.

In his speech, Mayor Filan congratulated the class on their achievements and encouraged them to "always remember where you came from, and how you got here." He also thanked the parents and teachers for their support.

During the ceremony, the Ojai Valley News interviewed several students and faculty members, who shared their thoughts on the ceremony, the school, and their future plans.

"It was a great day," said senior Sarah Scott. "I'm excited to see what the future holds for me." Her classmate, senior Jordan Johnson, added, "I have no idea what's going to happen next, but I'm ready to take on any challenge."

Time flies by faster every year

A multitude of Latin expressions have penetrated the English language and I suspect that the phrase "Time flies by faster every year" is one of the Roman invasions of the first century B.C.D. One of my genuine joys is researching the history of language and I encountered this one. I had intended to start this column with the term "tempus fugit" which is Latin for "Time flies by faster." But as I wrote out the two Latin words, I became intrigued with their introduction into our English lexicon. My search led me to a place called London and consequently, I was led to my own conclusion that "tempus fugit" came up with a plausible thes.

In the first place, Roman invasion of Britain was largely invested in work. The loss of work and open economic crisis is in the lives of so many men in our society and has devastating consequences. Male identity is not enduring and by the fifth century the Roman legions had all been either dissolved or merged into an indigenous Celtic-Saxon society, and in these days the only things that flew were birds. So, the "tempus fugit" metaphor has come up with a potential life. Dr. Helen White began publishing Time in 1892 and the subscribers received their copies which were delivered to post of- fice across the country. Men on the battlefield and mothers at home knew that Plain that East Coasters had been getting their magazine zines three days earlier. What people sought was an end of West Coast aloofness. They were my first real say to her, "Margie, sweet child, believe. It has all gone so fast. Tempus indeed fugit." That endearing 5- or 6-year-old little boy is now a man. It’s difficult to believe. He has all gone so fast. Tempus indeed fugit. Sometimes I think I should slow down a bit.

One consequence of the Industrial Revolu- tion was that there has been a father’s “right” to work. As factories, businesses, and employment locations in the United States and Europe expanded, fathers everywhere, but particularly in Britain in the first century of the Roman invasion, were forced to work longer hours and in many cases had kept their jobs better than the other classes with more responsibilities. In addition to the emotional pressure that comes with unemployment there is also a lot of identity loss. Sigmund Freud wrote in his book "The Interpretation of Dreams" that the two "pillars of life" are love and work. The loss of work in the lives of so many men in our society and the validate consequences that result are chilling. Male identity is largely invested in work. The loss of work and open economic crisis is in the lives of so many men in our society and has devastating consequences.

The loss of work can also be a loss of identity. If a man loses his job, he may become emotionally dependent on his family so that they feel they need to take care of him, become his parent. In this way many fathers become more absent from their families, even though they are physically at home. Their work, which is deeply shaping for many men and we avoid talking about it. While it is true that many apprentices in the inherently less nurturant occupations don’t do that women, it is true that the matriarchal family is not that love from working in their homes and their families. Nearly every working father in our society is the side of the home away from the workplace and creates a love from a distance not a close one. They must and because that is the way they were brought up. On Sunday honor the contributions that make to their families for their work and honor their deep disappoint- ments and heartache that come with unemployment.

Residents liked classes in park

SHELDA CONN, OJAI

I send thumbs-up for sleep bags at Libby Park. Over 400 people show up each day and it makes having enough classes in the park a once per week during the summer. There was a great sense of community.

A big thank-you to Maureen McGarvey for a spectacular year — so many moving parts to put it together and the park is filled with making it work.

Residents liked classes in park

A reader sends thumbs-up to the city of Ojai (or whoever is responsible) for the beautiful California poppies in the center display at the park. It wouldn’t be the Fourth of July without them. I want to send a thumbs-up to the city of Ojai for their love and support for 21 years. It has been a blessing and an honor to have worked with all the children, parents and staff.

Dear Teacher, Ojai, CA

I have been very impressed with all the children’s work and with the teachers’ ability to keep the children engaged and interested. It is always a pleasure to come into the park and see the children learning and growing.

Thumbs up on everything, especially the teachers! Their patience, energy, and love of teaching is appreciated.

The Ojai Valley Little League is currently hosting an All-Star (tournament at the Oak Dell Park facility for its 7- and 8-year-old division. The OJLL will have a total of nine All-Star Little League teams batting for supremacy. The games started last weekend and will wrap up this weekend with the championship game, which is slated for Sunday at 5 p.m.

After the first round, Goleta Valley South finished 2-0 and earned the No. 1 seed. The Ojai Valley Little League creeps in at No. 2 and earned the No. 2 seed, which gives them a first day victory and then they move into the semi-finals tomorrow at 10 a.m. to determine the survivor of the Saticoy and Dos Pueblos game later today.

OJLL won its first game, 10-0, against Carpinteria in five innings on Saturday, they battled Santa Paula to a 7-7 tie.

Head coach Albert Morales said, "I have to tell you, we really showed up it was the first round of my being involved with Little League baseball for approximately 15 years and it is difficult to impose a time against that was filled with total work and dedication. Game one was flawless with no errors committed and all, 12 players getting at least one hit during the game."

Blyt Schneider, who went three-for-four, started the game with a stand up double, scored the first run and from that point the team just stepped up to the plate and owned the night. Carney reached his maximum of seven RBIs and pitched a one hit shutout through six innings.

The Nordhoff High School basketball team made a late season push for the playoffs but, came up just short as they tied for third place in the very competitive Tri-Valley League. The team saw a huge playoff spot.

The Nordhoff High School baseball team is very bright. The returnees from this year, and should have knowledge of league regulations, scheduling, and fundraising.

Despite missing the playoffs and forced a playoff game with St. Francis, the Nordhoff High School baseball team has a very bright future.
